

- 146; despatches a column against Mourn* Bey, 203; letter from Napoleon to, 204 returns from Egypt, 392; repairs to head quarters, ib.; Napoleon's friendship for him, ib.; sent to Novi, 395; his bravery at the battle of Marengo, ib.; descriptor of his death, 399; monument to his memory, ii. 5; his remains deposited in the church of Mount St. Bernard, 350, n.
- Dessrenettes, M., physician to the French army, i. 200, n.
- Desmaison*, M., becomes bail for M. Bourrienne, i. 34.
- -, M., one of General Moreau's judges, ii. 289.
- Desoddières, Gerard, Club of Clichy held at his residence, i. 78.
- Dessolles, General, his letter to Marshal Marmont, iii. 367; commander of the National Guard, 375; favors the restoration of the Bourbons, 377; command of the National Guard restored to, iv. 230.
- Despeaux, Madame, her attendance upon the Empress Josephine, ii. 309; anecdote respecting, 341.
- Despont, M., professor of the College of Brienne, i. 8.
- Desprez, M., his imprudent speculations, iii. 18; his bankruptcy, 19.
- Didot, M., his taste for theatricals, ii. 106; arrives at Hamburg, iii. 91.
- Dietrichstein, Count, prisoner in France, i. 369.
- Directory, commits the campaign of Italy to Bonaparte's judgment, i. 67; accounts of its sittings, 79, n.; averse to the Treaty of Campo
- Formio, 100; Flag of the Army of Italy, sent to, 103; disapproves of the expedition against Malta, 117; its submission to Napoleon, 119; summons General Bonaparte to a private sitting, 237.
- Djezzar, Pasha of Acre, refuses his friendship to Bonaparte, i. 155.
- Dolgorouki, Prince, sent with a flag of truce to the Emperor Napoleon, iii. 5.
- Dolomieu, M., ill-treated by the Sicilians, i. 126.
- Domingo, Saint, expedition against, ii. 67.
- Domont, General, announcement of, iv. 176.
- Doormann, M., reproached by M. Bourrienne, ii. 369; his representations to M. Forshmanu, 370.
- Douai, Merlin of, his constant attendance on Napoleon, i. 118.
- Doublet, M., his complaints to Napoleon, ii. 88.
- Drake, Mr., his instructions, ii. 270; conspiracy of, ib.

Dresden, battle of, iii. 291. Driesen, General, his friendship for Louis XVIII., iv. 93; conversation with M. Bourrienne, 94. Drouot, General, his reply to Napoleon, iii. 340; pun respecting, iv. 122; his fidelity to Napoleon, 199; career and character, 379, n.
 Bubo-Crance", made War Minister, i. 228. Duboisson, M., shelters the proscribed persons, ii. 258. Ducis, M., reports respecting, ii. 150; his great talent, 198; violent verses, 199. Dugua, General, Bonaparte's letters to, i. 191, 204; his reply, 207. Dugomier, General, iv. 390, n. Dumouriez, General, supposed author of letters in Le Spectateur du Nord, i. 62; lands at Stade, iii. 3; pamphlets disseminated by, 21; his vagrant life, 30. Dumoutel, Abbe", conversations in his presence, i. 70. Dunand, M. (Napoleon's chef), tact of, i. 282, n.
 Dupas> General, appointed to the command of Hamburg, iii. 116; his tyrannical conduct, 117; tribunal created by, 118; sent to Liibeck, 119; his treatment of M. Nolt-ing, 120; appointed to command a division against Austria, 120. Dupont, General, appointed President of the Senate of Piedmont, ii. 3; his disgrace, iii. 130. Dupuis, Sieur, vice-principal of the college of Brienne before Father Berton, i. 6. Dupuy, General, killed at Cairo, i. 150. Durazzo, M., last Doge of Genoa, offers to unite Genoa to France, ii. 347. Durfort, M., professor of the college of

Brienne, i. 8. Durham, Lord, appointed Ambassador to Russia, iii. 260, n. Duroc, Marshal (Due de Frioul), epitome of life, i. 25, n.; declines the marriage with Hortense Beauharnais, 108, n.; wounded at St. Jean d'Acre, 186; his mission to the King of Prussia, 303; his conversations with him, ib.; one of the directors of the secret police, 328; his visit to the Priturn-to, 366; sent to congratulate Alexander on his accession, ii. 44; his attachment to llor-teuse Beauharnais, 72; married to Made-moiselle Hervas d'Almenara, 73, n.; letters to M. Bourrienne, 130, 171, 172, 173, 364, 368, 404; persuades him to remain with Napoleon, 132; his friendship for him, 182; relates an anecdote, 196; announces his recall from Berlin to him, iii. 2; inrro